

Ambulance Service of New South Wales

media statement

28 August 2007

Business as usual

The community can be assured that it will be business as usual for ambulance response and should continue to dial triple 0 in an emergency.

The Department of Health and the Health Services Union are currently before the NSW Industrial Relations Commission.

The Ambulance Service expects all ambulance officers to continue to perform all of their duties.

The Department of Health and the Ambulance Service will continue to negotiate in good faith with the HSU to seek resolution of all outstanding issues.
